

EDITOR'S NOTE

The Osgoode Hall Law Journal will be celebrating its 50th anniversary in the year 2008. The Journal began as a student initiative in 1958 and, over the years, has attained great eminence as a leader in the field of legal scholarship. The Editorial Board and law school community will celebrate this landmark year with a series of special issues of the Journal. Though the Journal's anniversary will be officially launched in the spring of 2008, the celebration begins in advance with this special issue on "Law and Feminism." In 2008, the Osgoode Hall Law Journal will publish issues that will be dedicated to Legal Ethics and Professional Responsibility, Environmental Law, Transnational Law and Comparative Constitutionalism, and Access to Justice and Law Reform.

On behalf of the Editorial Board, I would like to thank our Guest Editor for this issue—Osgoode Hall Professor Mary Jane Mossman. The Winter 2007 issue of the Journal provides a point of entry to our year of anniversary publications, and this strong collection of articles and reviews on feminist issues would not have been possible without Professor Mossman's initiative and leadership. Osgoode Hall Professor Trevor Farrow is the Guest Editor for our next issue—Spring 2008—which will feature articles, comments, and book reviews on Legal Ethics and Professional Responsibility.
